

WE'RE LOOKING FOR FIGHTERS INTERESTED IN BECOMING PROFESSIONAL LEAGUE ATHLETES

The intention of the World Combat League is to create an avenue of success for martial arts fighters, similar to athletes in America's other professional leagues. As the WCL develops, team franchises will offer proven fighters annual contracts. And those who distinguish themselves as "fan favorites" will be heavily marketed as the emerging superstars of the sport.

In 2009, six teams representing American cities and two International teams will compete throughout a six-month season in an effort to claim the World Combat League Championship trophy.

In creating a formula for achieving that kind of unprecedented success for our athletes, we have developed this project with primary attention to the following three points.

Team Concept: Combining the excitement of combat martial arts fighting with the thrill of routing for your favorite team gives the fans a better sense of connection to the sport. It also provides a better opportunity for marketing team leaders as "WCL Superstars," while it improves sponsorship opportunities in and around the cities that host a team.

Fighting Style: We believe that we are implementing the fighting style that offers the best potential for attracting the largest and most diverse possible audience. Since each fighter will only fight two, three-minute matches per contest (with a substantial rest period in between each of the two rounds), we expect to provide the fans with, extremely fast-paced, "full-throttle" fighting action in every round!

Chuck Norris: Mr. Norris has not been brought in to endorse this project. This IS his project, and has been a dream of his for the last 30 years. As the world's number one, international martial arts media icon, his leadership guarantees integrity, visibility and credibility. His plan is to create a league for our athletes that rival the most successful league sports in the world today.
